MEDICINE for the SOUL

A little child in church for the first time watched as the ushers passed the offering plates.

When they neared the pew where he sat, the youngster piped up so that everyone could hear: "Don't pay for me Daddy, I'm under five."

The Steinberg's maid looked unusually tired one morning, and so Mr. Steinberg asked what the matter was. "I've been buying things on the lay-away plan," she told him.

"Don't you mean lay-away plan?" he asked.

"No," she said, "I mean what I said. You buy things you can't afford and then you lay awake worrying how you're going to pay for them."

After years of scrimping and saving, a father told his family the good news: "We've finally saved enough money to buy what we started saving for in 1989." "You mean a brand-new Cadillac?" they asked eagerly.

"No," he replied, "a 1989 Cadillac."

Lillian decided to trim her household budget wherever possible; so instead of having a dress dry-cleaned, she washed it by hand. Proud of her savings, she boasted to her husband, "Just think, Henry, we are five dollars richer because I washed this dress by hand." "Good," he quickly replied. "Wash it again!"

Wife: "Dear, could I have some spending money?"

Husband: "Money, money, money. If you ask me, I think you need brains more than you need money."

Wife: "I was just asking you for what I thought you had the most of."

"Cash, check, or charge?" the cashier asked after folding items the woman wished to purchase. As she fumbled for her wallet, he noticed a remote control for a television set in her purse.

"Do you always carry your TV remote?" the sales clerk asked.

"No," she replied. "But my husband refused to come shopping with me, so I figured this was the meanest thing I could do to him."

A counterfeiter decided that the easiest way to pass off his phony $18 bills would be to unload them in some small rural town, so he drove until he found a tiny town with a single general merchandise store. He entered the store, went up to the counter, and handed one of the bogus bills to the man behind the counter. "Could you change this for me, please?"

The store clerk looked at the bill for a few seconds, then smiled at the man. "Of course I can. Would you prefer two $9 bills or three $6 bills?"
